Excerpt: . . . his whole work upon mount Zion and upon Jerusalem, I will punish the fruit of the stout heart of the king of Assyria. Other parts of the chapter evidently refer to the latter times in which we now live. It is true that there are at present no signs of such an approaching catastrophe. We should be obliged, if called to search and report, to exclaim with the angel that stood among the myrtle trees in the peaceful days of Darius, We have walked to and fro through the earth, and behold all the earth sitteth still and is at rest. Zech. I. But so it was in the palmy days of the prosperity and glory of great Babylon, the type of the empires of modern Babylon; but far superior to us, the head of gold being far mightier than the ten toes of...
