Not illustrated. 1904 Excerpt: . way as has been done here, this time using his own values of T_0 . If he had in this second step again used Damoiseau s values he would evidently have reproduced Damoiseau s excentricities. Now the values of kt and k for 1850, derived in this way, evidently have no right to be considered as equivalent to an observed result. Therefore Souillart s values of e_x , $?_2$, e_r , and ts_2 have no weight whatever, and for the satellites III and IV also Damoiseau s values are to be preferred to Souillart s. It is interesting to notice that an own excentricity of satellite II, of nearly the same amount as is found here, has already been suspected by Damoiseau, whose estimate is 0 00033. (See his remark quoted by Souillart from the Mimoreire Manuscrit, Souillart II, page 28). As to satellite I, only two of the six observed values of $/it$ and kl exceed twice their probable errors, and both of these are smaller than three times their p. e. Further the apparent equations of the centre implied by the observed values are absolutely irreconcilable with the theoretical motion of the perijove. l) The values of ty affected by the error in Tisserand (see the first footnote to page 84) were used in this computaion. These did on the whole differ more from those of system I than the correct There is thus no evidence of an appreciable own excentricity of this satellite. As the...
