Brand New Book ***** Print on Demand *****.In the course of our lives, things may go against our wishes (even when we worked hard), but that should be no cause for alarm. When we encounter sad moments, we must as quickly as possible renew our spirits, as the Bible encourages, so that life goes on. The emphasis here is, therefore, that we do not carry over bad feelings so that they do not mar our futures. If for any good thing, bad experiences are just meant to be lessons for corrections, not to be stored in the mind, to occupy precious spaces, and in turn destroy the human psyche. Imagine how the great eagle learns to fly; being tossed; in harsh wind by her mother, which dives each time to catch same before it (the child-eagle) land-crashed. Such, you can agree with me, is a hard way to learn. But it is the eagle s way to greatness. No wonder the eagle dares all winds in all forms of acrobatic summersault, flying to the highest altitude that any creature can attempt. I don t think tribulations endure in our lives because God hates us. No, problems may persist so that we get enough lessons inherent in the suffering (if we chose to call it so). Those who are passing through the wilderness should know that those who survive desert-heats come out great men. In all things, patience, persistence and diligence are virtues. Life is a battle, and like all other wars, it is won by adopting proper strategies. Reflect on your past always to get some overviews; then, ask solution-orientated questions about things that go wrong. Don t ever anything regret, because you...
