Not illustrated. 1909 Excerpt: .of thought and action, such as will not only influence involuntary functional activity, but also secure such a conformity to the physiological requirements of health as will best allow tin;-wonderful recuperative power of the cells of the organism to re-establish and maintain a condition of health. The physical effect of ps-ychologic influences has not received the consll eration that this important psycholog cal fact deserves on the part of the general practitioner. We have not truly estimated the importance of such therapeutic resources as will best maintain a heightened degree of resistive power in the cells of the physical organism so that the more serious structural changes would not result. When a more per feet state of health is maintained by tin general practitioner, the surgeon will have fewer pathologic lesions to fall to him for relief. Maintain a heighten. ed degree of resistive power in...
