From these figures it will be seen that the amount of fat may vary considerably, and that the water and nitrogenous materials are very much reduced in fat meat. Fat meat contains a greater store of energy than lean, but it is neither palatable nor easy of digestion, except by people who have to work under severe climatic conditions. The composition of meat is affected by various factors, such as the age of the animal, sex, breed, condition, feeding, and c. In young animals the muscles are not fully formed, and are more watery, so that young meat may lose from to of its weight in cooking; the syntonin or muscle-albumen is replaced by gelatine-forming substances, and the fat and salts are also diminished in amount. These defects are exemplified by veal, the use of which may lead to disturbance of the digestive system...
