Excerpt: . . . 9 that would be appropriate in the short run, given the emphasis that Tony Blair and our European colleagues have been putting on Africa, would be that the U. S. agree to a proposal that for the time being two chairs be added at the World Bank to represent with two additional members the 48 African countries. That would be a mod-est step. It could be set up as an interim step. I would like to say a final word with respect to the G-8, that the compromise on debt that looks like it is coming is very exciting. We think, however, that at the same time the U. S. should be the lead-er on the vaccine initiative. Such an initiative would be fully con-sistent with Americas values, based on creating incentives for the private market to act, and consistent with Americas...
